After a month of hiding in Boston at his friend George Hollard's house, Philip English was finally taken into custody. Deputy Marshall Jacob Manning, still using the old terms of office, reported that the marshal general had committed English to the marshal of Essex.¹⁵¹

Boston By Marilynne K. Roach

The General Court, sitting in Boston since the election, recommended a Public Fast for May 26 to petition Heaven's mercies for persecuted Protestants abroad, for the success of New England's summer crops, and for the setbacks of their enemies everywhere. On a more mundane level the court put Samuel Sewall in charge of finances to keep the Castle armed and ready.²⁸

While in Boston, assistants Hathorne and Corwin issued another arrest warrant for Philip English. This likely coincided with a search of George Hollard's house near the tide mill at the edge of the North End, but English successfully eluded the officers behind a sack of dirty laundry—the one place they did not look.²⁹

Noted it is felt Daniel Elliot immigrant is a miller, and George Hollard who hides Philip English friend to Gabriel Bernon of Oxford Plantation.
